I earned a double doctorate from two different institutions: the University for Foreigners of Perugia, Italy, and the University of Lorraine, France. I followed two PhD trainings and had two different vivas on the same day, the first in Italian (Language Sciences) and the second in French (Literature). I wrote one dissertation for both, which was substantially longer than a typical PhD dissertation. It had two sections, one for each doctoral discipline. It is mainly written in Italian with a few sections in French.
